Complaints about government departments and public organisations in 2011-12	4
Detailed statistics about government departments and public organisations 2011-12	15

Introduction

This is a supplement to Responsive and Accountable? The Ombudsman's review of complaint handling by government departments and public organisations 2011-12. In this supplement we publish detailed data about the complaints that we dealt with in 2011-12.

This includes an overview of complaints received and resolved in 2011-12 along with detailed statistical information about the complaint handling performance of individual government departments and public organisations.

Volume of complaints can provide an early warning of failures in service delivery, but a high number of complaints does not necessarily mean poor performance. It could mean that information provided by organisations about how to make a complaint is good. Many other factors can affect the volume of complaints, including the number of customers they have.

Government departments act as sponsors for different organisations. For example, in 2011-12 the UK Border Agency was sponsored by the Home Office. When we receive a complaint, we record it under the name of the organisation and under the name of the sponsor government department.

This supplement lists complaints statistics by organisation and by government department. Figures for government departments include the number of complaints for the organisations that the department sponsors.

Sometimes, the number of complaints about a government department may be greater than the total number of complaints about the organisations it sponsors. This is because we may have received complaints about the government department or a service it provides directly to the public.

Complaints about government departments and public organisations in 2011-12

People can come to us if they remain unhappy once a government department or public organisation has tried to resolve their complaint.

This page gives a snapshot of the volume of complaints we receive and how we dealt with them. In 2011-12 we received 6,818 complaints from the public wanting to complain about government departments and public organisations. This was a 7% decrease on the year before.

We resolved 6,892 complaints in the year:

198 We gave advice to people on the right organisation to complain to.

5,061 We helped people who had not complained to the organisation directly in the first instance or had not received a final response. We gave advice on what to do next.

403 Withdrawn by the complainant.

1,230 We took a closer look.

A closer look

Of the 1,230 complaints we looked at closely:

In 779 complaints we found that there was no case to answer

In 207 complaints we found that things had gone wrong, but had been put right

In 126 complaints we put things right quickly without the need for a formal investigation (compared with 127 the year before)

We agreed to investigate 118 complaints last year (compared with 125 the year before)

Investigations

In 2011-12 we resolved 114 complaints by formal investigation, of which:

Fully upheld

Partly upheld

Not upheld

Outcomes

When we found that something had gone wrong, our work led to:

114 apologies

122 wider remedies

189 compensation
payments

This includes complaints we resolved without the need for a formal investigation.
